

ABSTRACT

A method and a system for errorless switching, in a telecommunication network, from a basic data stream to a copy of the 5 basic data stream obtained by bridging of the basic data stream at a first network node, being characterized in that the switching is performed at a second network node receiving both the basic data stream and the copy data stream, upon performing an operation of delay equalization between the basic data stream and the copy data stream.